

The Books of the Savannah River Alliance

1 Highlands Clans, by Samuel McTavish
McTavish Bros.: Savannah 2087

Cyndy

This is the story of Samuel's Trip into the Piedmont Area of South Carolina and sparse Celtic Settlements in North Carolina. This area had several Scottish Game organizations that evolved into mutual aid groups. Everyone had a somewhat idealized view of these Clans. The aid organizations continued to bring in new members from those around them. Resulting in a new Celtic Clan membership which has evolved from those members in a locality. The old and new names of Clans are in existence here. Everything was carefully considered and in May 2048 for the 50th anniversary of the Scotland Act of 1998 there was formed a new union of the Celts, in which racial heritage was not a consideration as every man and woman was allowed to join the clan of their choice.

2 The Rise and the Fall of the New Confederacy, by Dr. I.C. Rivers
Georgia Southern College Press: Statesboro 2028

Frank

The story of the failure of the Second Southern Confederacy, its rise starting in 2010 and growth due to a few charismatic leaders, to its sudden and untimely end in the year 2020 with its attempt to take Wilmington, North Carolina from the units of 2nd, 6th, and 8th USMC Regiments. The three arrayed division (1st, 3rd, 5th) of the Confederate First Corps were lured into a trap at Wilmington, NC. No organized force was able to escape, much like the "Highway of Death" experienced by Iraqi's in Kuwait. This led directly to a revolution in the SSC and the end of the organization as it devolved into local rule and to worse in some areas.

3 My Years on the Border, by Jason Porter
Savannah Military Press: Savannah 2093

Tom

The life story of a recently retired Yemassee Base Commander, Yemassee is the main base that guards I-95 Route from the north and as such sees much of the action verses the Sumter Raiders. The duties of Lieutenant Colonel Jason Porter have taken him from his days in artillery private at Statesboro, to his attendance at Statesboro as an Officer Cadet, to his time as the Gunnery Officer aboard the SS Crusader, Artillery Officer of the Barnwell Battery, then Executive Officer of the SS Wolverine, the Commander of the Statesboro Battery, the Deputy Commander of the Altamaha Base, with his final 5 year posting as the Commander of the Yemassee Base.

4 Savannah Area Wildlife Guide, by Edgar Deerkiller
McTavish Bros.: Savannah 2089

Frank

This is a guide to identification, habitat, and specifics to the wild animal life that exist around the coastal region and lowland region of South Carolina and Georgia. Mr. Deerkiller is an acclaimed hunter who hunts these regions to support the needs of his family and as a guide for others who wish to hunt. He runs a school based in which teaches hunting skills and lore to men and women in their teens. Mr. Deerkiller's father was a First American and taught him the ways of the tribe for several years. Upon his father's death he returned from traveling with the tribe to his mother and began to support her as an honorable gentleman should. Eventually he started his own family and has been teaching hunters at his school along with shorter hunting trips than the year long treks he made with his father, both of his son's are avid hunters as well.

5 My Years Observing the Moot, by Judge J. Baker
Georgia Southern College Press: Statesboro 2038

Cyndy

Judge Baker was a Grand Moot President and as Chief Justice of the Grand Moot in Savannah. Judge started young as a Justice of the Peace, when the positions of the SRA were first established. He then was elected to the Statesboro Moot as a representative of Richmond Hill, then served the Moot Court there as a Clerk, then as a Justice, he then returned to elective office as a representative of Statesboro and was elected by the Statesboro Moot as a representative to the Grand Moot, he was then selected by his Peers to be a Moot President in Statesboro and then to be the Grand Moot President from which he was appointed as new Chief Justice of the Grand Moot. Judge Baker has served in the almost all the elected and moot appointed positions of the SRA.